Whittier Area Peace and Justice Coalition

. "We the People 2.0" confronts its viewers with the ravages of mine failings and leaky containment ponds of sludge and ooze, all of which are killing people. The film documents contamination in the cancer-blighted small towns of North America. The film's brief is laudable: Alongside documenting grassroots activism, including the kayak flotillas that protested Shell Oil in Seattle, the film focuses on legal challenges presented to corporations by granting rights to ecosystems
